In this talk, we'll discuss how to count things (like permutations), how to q-count them (by keeping track of a combinatorial statistic), and how to q-count them in a completely different way (by "categorifying" to an analogous linear algebra problem). Somewhat remarkably, the two q-counts sometimes give the same answer.